From the Director's Desk:

Peace and the Public Library

Before embarking upon a career in librarianship, I studied American History, particularly the presidencies of Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, and Woodrow Wilson.

The achievements of each of these presidents are debated among historians. Each man made significant contributions to America. Each also, in their words and actions, demonstrated prejudices against other races. The pain inflicted upon others through their prejudice must be balanced against the good born of their actions.

Recently a group of students at Princeton University protested to have portraits of Woodrow Wilson removed from the school, and to have his name removed from the University college bearing his name. All at Princeton, and elsewhere, are struggling to reconcile the racism in our history with the best parts of our nation's past.

What does any of this have to do with a public library in Jefferson Township? The public library is a place where you can go to become informed when trying to make peace with the best and worst of our history. Here you will find books that detail the significance of Woodrow Wilson's domestic and international policies, as well as exploring the tragedy of his mistreatment of other races.

Read, research and learn at the public library. Then you'll be able to make an informed decision about the worth of historical figures such as Woodrow Wilson.

Our happiest holiday wishes to all, from the staff of the Jefferson Township Public Library. Have the merriest Christmas, the brightest Hanukkah, and the best Kwanzaa. However you celebrate, enjoy a festive and delightful holiday season.

We wish you a happy and healthy 2015, with many good books and the time to read (or listen) to them.

Thank you for your continued patronage and support of the library. We look forward to serving you in the new year!

The Coming of Light — by Mark Strand (1934-2014)

Even this late it happens:
the coming of love, the coming of light.
You wake and the candles are lit as if by themselves,
stars gather, dreams pour into your pillows,
sending up warm bouquets of air.
Even this late the bones of the body shine and tomorrow's dust flares into breath.

Science Sundays: Our Extraordinary Earth

Come to the library each month for a beautifully filmed movie about our planet and its wonders. This is great family entertainment for all ages...and the popcorn's free!

Editor's Picks: 2015

Favorite books I've read during the last year, in no particular order...

At the Water's Edge by Sara Gruen (A love story set in the Scottish Highlands during WWII.)

Let Me Be Frank With You by Richard Ford (Frank Bascombe confronts his cranky, funny, and often inappropriate self, post-Sandy.)

M Train by Patti Smith (A perceptive and poetic memoir that Smith has called "a roadmap to my life.")

Sweet Caress by William Boyd (A evocative story which brings passionate photographer and risk-taker, Amory Clay, wondrously to life.)

A History of Loneliness by John Boyne (An astounding and powerful novel which explores the difficult subject of child sexual abuse by Catholic priests.)

All My Puny Sorrows by Mariam Toews ("...tears and laughter are ground into some magical elixir that seems like the essence of life" in this story about two sisters.)

Miss Emily by Nuala O'Connor (reimagines the private life of Emily Dickinson through her own voice and through the eyes of her family's Irish maid)

The Harder They Come by T. C. Boyle (A powerful novel exploring the roots of violence in the American character.)

Purity by Jonathan Franzen ("Purity is a dark-hued comedy of youthful idealism, extreme fidelity, and murder.")

Unforgettable: A Son, A Mother and the Lessons of a Lifetime by Scott Simon (A tribute to the ex-showgirl who taught her only son to be honest, kind, and entertaining.)
